This document is based on the proposals appearing in N1636 and N1637, and contains a revised proposal summary.

1. Basic encoding principles

To encode Egyptian hieroglyphs, we should adopt the existing encoding principles which have been developed since computers were introduced into Egyptology in the late 1970s and the early 1980s, and which are widely if not universally employed by Egyptologists today. The Manuel de codage (Paris: 1988) and the Macintosh and Windows implementations (MacScribe and WinGlyph) which support it are sufficiently well-developed that they can be adopted with a minimum of effort into the UCS — optimizing the transfer from existing encoded texts to UCS-coded texts.

2. Character set repertoire

2.1 Repertoire

To begin with, two distinct repertoires should be encoded. The first, smaller set, called BASIC EGYPTIAN HIEROGLYPHS, consists of the essential Gardiner Middle Egyptian sign list, and comprises 761 characters. The second, much larger set, called EGYPTIAN HIEROGLYPHS EXTENDED, as presented in Hieroglyphica (Utrecht and Paris: 1993), comprises 4548 characters. Additionally, 40 Alternate Format characters will be needed in order to map currently-encoded texts to the UCS. It is expected that in the next decade the final number of hieroglyphs known and analyzed will total some 8000, which means that we can expect, eventually, further extensions (such as EGYPTIAN HIEROGLYPHS EXTENDED-A) to be added to the standard.

2.2. Source of the repertoire

To achieve the maximum ease of mapping the characters, the 23 eight-bit fonts (4 Basic and 19 Extended) of the Centre for Computer-Aided Egyptological Research should be taken as the base for encoding, and the characters should be arranged serially in the UCS. This means that the 166 characters in Glyph Basic A will occupy positions x000 to x0B5, the 192 characters in Glyph Basic B will occupy positions x0B6 to x175, the 185 characters in Glyph Basic C will occupy positions x176 to x22E, and the 202 characters in Glyph Basic D will occupy positions x22F to x2F8. And so on for the 19 fonts of the Glyph ExtLib A - S set.

Issue: A number of code positions in the Extended Egyptian section are given as reserved for future standardization. These unused positions correspond to duplicate characters or to gaps in the Hieroglyphica fonts. It has been considered practical to retain the relative positions of the characters in order to facilitate conversion between 8-bit and 16/32-bit implementations.

WG2 and the UTC may choose to rearrange all the characters proposed here in a single unbroken block, as opposed to in two blocks (Basic Hieroglyphs and Extended Hieroglyphs), listing all characters in nominal/numeric order. This would impose a not insignificant burden on the proposer to create new fonts reflecting this ordering, and could introduce error where none presently exists.

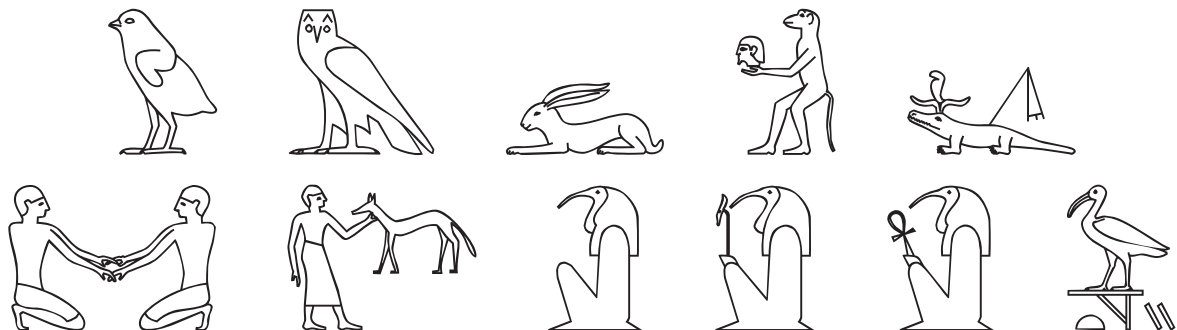

Alternatively, WG2 and the UTC may choose to keep Basic and Extended but also to “close up” all blank positions in the Extended block. This would complicate (somewhat) table-based conversion between existing fonts and the UCS (by requiring a new table without constant offset to be created). It would be somewhat, but not overly, burdensome to the proposer to alter the fonts used here to achieve this.

In either case, the present proposal should be evaluated as it is for names and glyphs, since the present arrangement should be practical for review by expert Egyptologists.

3. Character names

One can designate Egyptian hieroglyphic characters in a number of ways:

- by conventional sound (w, m, wn) which works for only a very few characters
- by complex description (baby chick, owl, hare, standing monkey holding severed head, recumbant crocodile with cobra headdress and flagellum, two crouching men holding hands, skirted man holding jackal aloft by the throat, seated Thoth, seated Thoth with sceptre, seated Thoth with ankh, Dhwty or Thoth)
- by standardized sign number (G043, G017, E034, E058A, I098, A470, A248A, C003, C003A, C003B, G026B)

Obviously the only sensible way of naming the characters is to identify them with their standard Egyptological catalogue numbers, since otherwise the character names would be picturesque but ridiculously long. The name EGYPTIAN HIEROGLYPHIC SIGN E034 refers uniquely and unambiguously to the hare character used for the sound wn.

NOTE: The conventional UCS names have been padded with zeros (A003 not A3) in order to facilitate sorting of the names list; it is strongly suggested that this practice be endorsed by WG2 and the UTC.

4. Alternate format characters

The complexity of the repertoire is largely a problem for the Egyptologists in the first place and for the preparer of the encoding proposal in the second; but the Basic and Extended sets are finite and well-defined. More subtly difficult, however, is mapping the formatting characters of the Manuel de codage to the UCS. The chief question is, how closely must the UCS encoding reflect them? My view is that it should reflect as many of them as possible.

4.1 Plain text and Egyptian hieroglyphs

Positioning is an essential part of Egyptian hieroglyphic text processing, and the UCS must represent positioning and directionality of Egyptian hieroglyphs accurately and completely in plain text. It should be assumed that Egyptian has a basic left-to-right directionality; both left-to-right and right-to-left directionalities are attested, but modern scholars generally employ the former. The existing U+200E LEFT-TO-RIGHT MARK and U+200F RIGHT-TO-LEFT MARK can be used to effect whatever directional requirements are needed. However, these marks should be used only for reversing the directionality of the entire text, not of individual signs, which may be mirrored without affecting the directionality of the text. For those, U+x318 EGYPTIAN HIEROGLYPHIC MIRROR SIGN is proposed here, as are a number of rotation signs — though it should be noted that other scripts, such as Runic, could benefit from such signs. U+x305 EGYPTIAN HIEROGLYPHIC END OF LINE MARKER and U+x306 EGYPTIAN HIEROGLYPHIC END OF PAGE MARKER are used for correct processing of columnar Egyptian, and their Manuel de codage equivalents are heavily relied upon in current encoded texts.

In general, these alternate formatting characters will be required also for representation of other scripts, such as Maya Hieroglyphs or Runic. Two of these marks identified as being particularly useful in a Mayan context are given at U+x326 — U+x327. U+x325, EGYPTIAN HIEROGLYPHIC COMBINING CHARACTER SHADING shades not part of a broken quadrant per se, but a single damaged character in a cluster.

4.2. Beginnings and endings

Signs like U+x307 EGYPTIAN HIEROGLYPHIC BEGIN CARTOUCHE and U+x308 EGYPTIAN HIEROGLYPHIC END CARTOUCHE should be understood to function exactly as do U+0028 LEFT PARENTHESIS and U+0029 RIGHT PARENTHESIS (that, is, they take bi-directional context into account). Rendering should draw a continuous line between the beginning and ending glyphs.

4.3 Fancy text

Colour is not normally considered to be a feature of plain text, though red (grey in the hardcopy of this document) is used meaningfully in the Coffin Texts and the New Kingdom funerary papyri:

Papyrus of Ani plate IV:26-27

Papyrus of Ani plate VI:6-7

Red colour and black colour are encoded with special locking-shift sequences in the Manuel de codage. It should be noted that the Naxi or Tompa script (in China) also uses colour to achieve semantic distinctions, and it may not be practical (in principle) to proscribe colour as a quality of plain text. In the present proposal, an encoding is given for red hieroglyphs, because the following editorial practice supports it: See below examples from Budge 1895 in which the rubric is represented not by colour but by a black bar above:

Papyrus of Ani plate IV:26-27

Papyrus of Ani plate VI:6-7

It is proposed that U+x313 EGYPTIAN HIEROGLYPHIC BEGIN RUBRIC and U+x314 EGYPTIAN HIEROGLYPHIC END RUBRIC be encoded and that rendering as red or as a black line above be left to implementation. The RUBRICS function just as the CARTOUCHES do.

Issue: Have all the relevant Manuel de codage formatting characters been accounted for in the proposal?

5. Allocation in the UCS

Egyptian hieroglyphs should be encoded in Plane 1 of the UCS. Three rows are required for Basic Egyptian Hieroglyphs and sixteen rows are required for Extended Egyptian Hieroglyphs. The Alternate Format Characters are a bit difficult to place, since three rows are required for the Basic characters, and there are only 7 empty spaces at the end of the row. Assuming that the Basic characters occupy positions 0001 x000, it would be convenient to begin the Extended characters at position 0001 x400. This leaves space in row 0001 x300 available for future standardization (such as additional Alternate Format characters, Meiroitic alphabetic characters (which were taken directly from the hieroglyphic alphabet), Egyptian numerals (which are not part of this proposal), etc.).
